

THE JOSEPH COMPANY

There is a mantle on a people
destined to rule beside a King.
And like a coat of many colors,
they have a priestly covering.

They are the favored of their Father,
they are the object of His love.
But they are envied by the others,
and are spoken evil of.

Some of the people are offended,
and they are busy planning schemes.
They seek to silence His anointed:
these interpreters of dreams.

They are acquainted with the prison house,
and have heard the captives groan.
They are familiar with the stripping,
and have endured the days alone.

They escape the harlot's clutches,
and the enticement of her wiles.
They pay a price for their integrity;
they refuse to be defiled.

Some would think they perish,
but they are raised up from the pit.
Reproach will change to honor,
when next to Him, they sit.

They grow strong in faith and wisdom,
and they instruct in what they know.
Because the Word abides in them,
they are loosed from prison clothes.

They are a people with a birthright,
and they contain a living seed.
The Word of God is stored in them,
they have the corn that people need.

No corn is found in Egypt;
there is no oil, wine or bread.
So He is making them His storehouse,
from which the nations will be fed.

The King is building up His granaries,
where He distributes all His food.
They will preserve the lives of many;
they will feed a multitude.

They see the field of their dominion:
the earthly realm and all within.
They see the stars within the heavens,
where they shall reign with Him.

They understand the secret mysteries,
and they speak of things they see.
They have a vision of the throne room.
These are the Joseph Company.
